

In This Issue

- Think Differently, Lead Differently
– Part 2: Framing
- The Game-Changing Power Within Your Organization
- Articles Curated Just For You!

Our Services

Organizational Performance Improvement

Training & Development

H.R. Management For Small Businesses

Contact Us!

603-878-1546

Click the icon!

Think Differently, Lead Differently

Part 2: Framing

Once upon a time, a parable was created that became well known across the world. “Six Blind Men And The Elephant” describes how people interpret events and encounters very differently due to mindsets we develop through our individual life experience – mindsets that act as filters, coloring our perceptions of those events and encounters. These fundamental differences between people can lead to disagreement, conflict and confusion.

I am convinced that these different mindsets impact the behavior and communication of leaders as well as the way people on the receiving end interpret that behavior and communication.

If you’re interested in learning about yourself and others, and/or if you’re a leader who wants others to truly understand your decisions, rationale, vision, and priorities, this 3-part series is for you. Read on!

The Game-Changing Power Within Your Organization

Watch This Short Video!

You may be wondering what the Ohio State University’s Marching Band has to do with organization performance. It’s an unexpectedly great performance, don’t you agree? The video shows the Ohio State University marching band performing an amazing 2012 half-time show with a video game theme. We watch in awe as they execute the show with incomparable teamwork.

So, it’s about Teamwork, you may be saying to yourself. But, if you think about it, it’s team-work on steroids. Turbo-charged teamwork.

This show was actually the product of collaboration involving students, Interim Band Director, Jonathan Waters, and his staff; it's a live demonstration of the power of teamwork plus collaboration.

We're all familiar with the acronym for TEAM: Together We Achieve More. We've seen this to be true in business for years. I am convinced that Teamwork has a sister, Collaboration, and when both teamwork and collaboration are both in play, the results can be game-changing.

Read on!

Articles Curated Just For You!

Each month, we read voraciously, carefully selecting articles we think will help you to add value at work. Click here to see the best articles we've found in the past month, and prior.